After years of asking you to send us your best hospitality work, we wanted to see the people behind it, and the space where you get it done. The response was heartening. Architecture and design firms from across the country sent us an array of photos ranging from architectural shots to show off professional prowess, to irreverent shots of office Halloween parties and puppies to show off personality. We had fun looking at all of them. Thanks so much to everyone who submitted. Here's a selection of our favorites.

Above: Our favorite: "After Hours" by First Circle Design. The lighting design firm's homage to its hardworking production manager, Francis Mempin, was lit, taken, and altered at its office in Newport Beach, California. Multi-tasking and late hours? We hear you Francis. Left: CBT's 38,000-square-foot Boston office is housed in an historic warehouse. Top: A printemps palette dominates BG Studio International's New York City office.
